Utah

With the help of investors, Robert Redford (left) bought an entire valley in the 1960s. Sundance Resort, an environmentally conscious mountain-lodge-style hotel, is what sprung up over the years that followed.

In winter, it keeps ski bunnies happy with 41 runs spread over 500 acres. Come summer, biking, hiking, fishing and horse riding are on offer. Too much action? Then lie back and enjoy the spa or visit the Art Shack, where workshops in pottery, jewellery-making and photography are on offer.

• Double rooms cost from around £160 per night. Visit www.sundanceresort.com.

Sleeping with the STARS!

Don't just hang out with celebs on your travels — stay at one of their hotels!

Belize

Film-maker Francis Ford Coppola built his first Belize hotel in the country's Mayan jungle and, inspired by its success, he created Turtle Inn on the southern coast.

You can stay in Francis Coppola's Pavilion House, which caters sumptuously for four, but all accommodation here is fab. The Balinese-style cabanas tumble down to the beach, with some situated right on the sand.

Belize boasts some of the best scuba-diving waters in the world and there are also Mayan sites to visit in the nearby rainforest.

• Double rooms cost from around £153 per night, with breakfast. Visit www.blancaneaux.com.
